8 things that the quietly rich
don't do:

Jade Bonacolta ✨

1. They don't want mainstream fame.

Being a celebrity isn't appealing to them.

And they rarely post about their personal lives on social media.

Privacy is the new luxury.

2. They don't buy a ton of material things.

The quietly rich spend most of their money on:

- experiences (that create priceless memories)
- things that will give them more free time (outsourcing)
- things that will improve their health
- investments that will grow their wealth

3. They don't work 24/7 in a job they dislike.

Many people who are rich in money are actually “poor” in time.

Not the quietly rich. They prioritize time freedom.

They want to be able to say yes to anything at a moment's notice.

4. They don't think "more" is always better.

In fact, they believe that less is more.

Fewer phone notifications, a small tribe of close friends, a closet of only their favorite clothes, fewer obligations.

Fewer things = all of them have more meaning.

5. They don't play status games.

The quietly rich have a deep understanding of themselves.

A quiet confidence.

They have no need to prove themselves to others — and aren't interested in playing status games for attention.

6. They don't brag about their wins.

Ever notice how many people just talk about their goals (rather than make any progress on them)?

The quietly rich move in silence.

They celebrate briefly, then move on to accomplishing the next one.

7. They don't linger on regrets.

One of the most important parts of being quietly rich...

is having a quiet mind.

A mind free of self-doubt, anxiety, what-if's and regrets.

Instead, they act from a mindset of growth, self-belief, and abundance.

8. They don't blindly follow what society says "success" is.

The quietly rich question the defaults.

They don't just want to be "rich" in money.

They want to be "rich" in time, health, loving relationships, and and purpose.
